Did You Know??

There are 2 major types of wax; grip wax used to provide grip on the centre part of the classic ski and glide wax used on the ends of classic skis and the full length of the free technique ski. The average skier is best to start with several different types of grip wax from the same manufacturer. They will provide good grip in most types of snow conditions. With experience (or the help of your fellow club members) you can gradually expand your knowledge and expertise and tackle more advanced waxing and snow conditions.

Come on out on the 14th of February for the waxing clinic!!!
